

Useful Web Sites for LIOSians

Search Engines

<http://searchenginewatch.com/links>

Looking for search engines? This section of Search Engine Watch lists some top choices in various categories. Major Search Engines and Directories, Metacrawlers and Metasearch Engines, News Search Engines, Paid Listings/CPC Search Engines, Shopping Search Engines, Multimedia Search Engines: Image, audio and video searching, Search Toolbars and Utilities, Kids Search Engines, Specialty Search Engines, Country-Specific Search Engines.

<http://www.accoona.com>

Accoona.com is a search engine with interactive tools that provides users with better web, business and news results, powered by proprietary Artificial Intelligence technology.

<http://www.ask.com>

Ask.com offers many innovative features and tools to help you get the information you need quickly and easily. You can search news, shopping, maps, images, videos, bloglines, etc.

<http://www.altavista.com>

The main AltaVista search site has been improved, with a much more streamlined and user-friendly interface and more search options as well.

<http://www.answers.com>

Answers.com offers free access to millions of topics from the world's leading publishers. Answers.com's collection of over three million answers is drawn from over 60 titles from brand-name publishers, as well as original content created by Answers.com's own editorial team. The site offers useful answers in categories like business, health, travel, technology, science, entertainment, arts, history and many more.

<http://www.clusty.com>

Clusty is the search site owned and operated by Vivísimo that uses the award-winning Clustering Engine to organize search results into folders grouping similar items together. Clusty allows users to focus on their areas of interest without all the chaff.

<http://www.dmoz.com>

The Open Directory Project is the largest, most comprehensive human-edited directory of the Web. It is constructed and maintained by a vast, global community of volunteer editors.

<http://www.dogpile.com>

Dogpile brings together the Web's best search engines in one place to deliver the most comprehensive and relevant results. The resulting metasearch solution is an efficient, single-search-box engine that removes duplicates and analyzes the results to ensure that the best results are always on top of the pile.

<http://www.exalead.com/search>

Exalead provides direct access to structured and unstructured information through a natural language interface. With Exalead, natural language becomes the ultimate user interface with which users can access information of many types.

<http://www.gigablast.com>

With one of the largest and freshest indexes in the world, Gigablast Inc. has recently joined the elite ranks of major search engine companies. Founded in 2000, Gigablast was created to index up to 200 billion pages with the least amount of hardware possible. The Gigablast website provides unique "Gigabits" of information, enabling visitors to refine their searches easily based upon related topics from search results.

<http://home.inter.net/takakuwa/search/search.html>

Search Engines Worldwide is a collection of search engines and directories listed alphabetically by the country as well as the region. Search Engines Worldwide is one of the largest search engine links on the Internet. Whatever you are searching for, you can find it using a large number of search engines linked here.

<http://www.google.com>

This search engine is considered by most people to be one of the most popular, the best and the fastest available.

<http://www.itools.com/front.html>

This award-winning site is an excellent source of search tools (people, video, etc.), language tools (dictionary, translators, etc.), research tools (magazines, encyclopedia, biographies, etc.), and others.

<http://www.ixquick.com>

Calling itself "the world's most powerful metasearch engine," Ixquick also features a clean, simple interface. It indexes fourteen other search engines and directories, though users can choose between them if they wish. It offers metasearches of video, images, and an international phone directory, and supports European languages also.

<http://www.joeant.com>

Try this subject directory/portal of reviewed Web sites and blogs.

<http://www.kartoo.com>

KartOO is a metasearch engine with visual display interfaces. As soon as you launch a search, Kartoo analyses your request, questions the most relevant search engines, selects the best sites, and puts them on a site map that diagrams the relationships between them so that you have a visual representation of your results.

<http://mahalo.com>

Mahalo is a human-powered search engine that creates organized, comprehensive, and spam free search results for the most popular search terms. Mahalo finds and organizes the best links for search terms, so you don't have to. With traditional search engines you need to figure out the right search term and find relevant results within an unorganized list that often contains irrelevant results, spam, and some mediocre sites. With Mahalo, you can enter a simple search term and instantly get an organized page of results that includes only great links.

<http://www.metacrawler.com>

One of the original metasearch engines, and still a good choice for getting results of many types from many other search engines simultaneously.

<http://www.metaeureka.com>

Like many metasearch engines, this one brings you results from a dozen other search engines.

<http://www.pandia.com>

The Pandia Search Central gives Internet users access to several tools that will help them become more able net searchers. Pandia includes a short and easy Internet search tutorial (<http://www.pandia.com/goalgetter/index.html>) as well as a page with links to important search engines and directories (Pandia Powersearch). The Pandia Plus Directory, powered by the Open Directory Project, includes some 3.5 million sites handpicked by thousands of enthusiasts and experts from all over the world.

<http://www.searchezee.com>

SearchEzee offers a unified interface and search form for over 200 of the top search engines, metasearch engines, directories and topical resources.

<http://www.searchturtle.com>

The Search Turtle Web Directory is an original website directory offering links to websites that have passed very demanding submission guidelines. Search Turtle is a human-edited website directory and is updated daily. Search Turtle editors are always working to bring you the very best of websites on the Internet. The Search Turtle goal is to be among the best web portals for searching the Internet by offering websites with meaningful content. Search Turtle prides itself on being one of the pickiest directories with rigorous standards required for inclusion. Websites that get into the shell (directory listings) of Search Turtle are hand selected, top quality, spam-free websites.

<http://turbo10.com>

This meta search and “invisible Web” search engine searches the Deep Net – a vast array of specialist databases that range from business associations, universities, libraries, and government departments. These specialist search engines are inaccessible to traditional crawler-based engines such as Altavista.com and google.com which can index only static pages. Turbo10 is the first commercial metasearch engine to connect to over 1000 of these specialized engines en masse, broadening the depth and range of search results for the online searcher.

http://www.webbrain.com/html/default_win.html

WebBrain lets you search the Web visually, so you can explore a dynamic picture of related information, instead of searching through long lists of text. WebBrain uses TheBrain technology, which enables effective use of knowledge on the Web, the corporate intranet, and even your personal computer.

<http://www.yahoo.com>

This is one of the best-known all-purpose search sites, directories, and “Web shopping malls.”

Web Resources and Research

<http://www.ipl.org/div/aon>

This is a guide to web sites of prominent organizations and associations, from the Internet Public Library.

<http://iiswinprd01.petersons.com/GradChannel/Search.asp?sponsor>

You can find a graduate school or program by using Peterson’s graduate program search tool, which allows you to combine the most important criteria so that you can quickly get a very targeted list of graduate schools or programs from which to choose. You can link from the result list to read details about the program and send an Instant Inquiry to those programs that interest you.

<http://www.gradschools.com>

GradSchools.com provides information on some 58,500 graduate programs and gives you links to sites in the following areas: graduate schools, online graduate schools, masters degree online programs, the GRE exams, college loans, etc. It contains a unique and comprehensive directory categorized by curriculum and subdivided by geography.

<http://graduateschools.com>

GraduateSchools.com is a comprehensive graduate school search engine for the educational community, prospective students, existing and post graduate students. The site brings the student and graduate school together by serving the needs of both: a complete, searchable database, providing all information in one consistent format making it easy for the student to find the most appropriate Graduate Program, and a powerful sourcing tool for graduate schools.

<http://www.readyminds.com>

ReadyMinds is the Web’s premier one-on-one career counseling service for college students. If you’re a college student, nationally certified counselors work with you to determine your strengths, preferences, and values---all factors in determining a solid career plan just for you. At the end of the program, you walk away with distinct career options, as well as a blueprint for pursuing them.

<http://www.collegeanswer.com/index.jsp>

With the largest online searchable database of scholarships, extensive content and tools for planning and preparing for college, and the ability to apply for education loans on line, SallieMae College Answer is the most comprehensive go-to-college site on the Internet for students and families who seek reliable information. Especially if you’re researching funding options, this site delivers with superior content and interactive tools that you won’t find anywhere else.

http://studentaid.ed.gov/students/publications/student_guide/index.html

The Federal Student Aid Information Center is a comprehensive resource on student financial aid from the U.S. Department of Education. Grants, loans, and work-study are the three major forms of aid available through the Department's Federal Student Aid office. Updated each award year, the site provides information about the programs and how to apply for them. At this site you can download the new guide:

http://studentaid.ed.gov/students/attachments/siteresources/FundingEduBeyondHighSchool_0809.pdf

<http://www.eduref.org/Eric>

The Education Resources Information Center (ERIC), sponsored by the Institute of Education Sciences (IES) of the U.S. Department of Education, produces the world's premier database of journal and non-journal education literature. ERIC provides a public Web site for searching nearly 1.2 million citations going back to 1966 and, with contributor permission, accessing more than 110,000 full-text materials at no charge. ERIC is moving forward with its modernization program, incorporating new technologies to facilitate the addition of materials and help users identify, evaluate, and obtain education-related research and other materials.

<http://www.infoplease.com>

This is a gateway to many Web resources: dictionaries, almanacs, encyclopedias, atlases, biographies, etc. It includes a “homework center” and many interesting facts as well.

<http://www.fathom.com>

This archive, provided by Columbia University, offers access to the complete range of free content developed for Fathom by its member institutions. Columbia encourages you to browse this archive of online learning resources, including lectures, articles, interviews, exhibits and free seminars. You can find additional online resources from Columbia University at www.columbia.edu and from the members of the Fathom consortium at their own websites.

<http://articles.findarticles.com/p/home?tb=art>

Here you can search millions of articles from leading academic, industry and general interest publications. FindArticles gives you free access to information you can trust, from a collection you'll find here only.

<http://www.magportal.com>

Find individual articles from many freely accessible magazines by browsing the categories or using the search engine. When you find an article you like, you can mark it, or retrieve similar articles.

<http://www.essaypage.com/categories/176-021.html>

This site provides over 20,000 academic essays and a customized research option. You receive a list of titles in order of relevance when you submit a search query. All of the documents are ready for same-day delivery and priced at $9.95 per page with a free bibliography. You can view a brief description of the paper before ordering. You can find term papers at <http://www.1millionpapers.com> and at <http://www.realpapers.com>.

<http://www.dissertationsandtheses.com>

This site bills itself as the Internet's premier source of assistance for graduate and post-graduate students conducting difficult research for their theses and/or dissertations! The extensive Web site lists more than 25,000 quality research papers, experimental studies, and even examples of entire theses to download, study from, and cite in the body of your own thesis or dissertation. You can search by keyword and view abstracts or excerpts before ordering a paper (for a fee) for delivery by e-mail, fax, or FedEx. You can also receive customized research help.

<http://www.phddata.org>

This site will contain a database of doctoral dissertations in progress around the world. It is in its very beginning stages and many functions are currently being developed. It is currently taking the first step of collecting data regarding PhD dissertations in progress.

<http://www.lib.umi.com/dissertations>

Welcome to ProQuest Digital Dissertations! As a visitor, you will be able to freely access the most current two years of citations and abstracts in the Dissertation Abstracts database. To search the entire database of more than 1.6 million titles, you will need to connect from a subscription institution.

<http://www.onlinenewspapers.com>

OnlineNewspapers.com is a metasite that claims to index 10,000 online newspapers from around the world. These are offered by country (or province/state) in pull-down menus. For each country or state/province, newspaper titles are listed with links to the respective homepages. Throughout the site, users are invited to submit newspapers not listed. Though the pages for some listings are very slow to load, the site as a whole is a solid reference resource for a variety of users.

<http://www.daypop.com>

Simple and fast, Daypop lets you search 59,000 News Sites, Weblogs and RSS feeds for current events and breaking news.

<http://www.medweb.emory.edu/MedWeb>

MedWeb from Emory University is a gateway leading to a great number of Web sites in the healthcare area. Click on Mental Health for resources specific to this area.

<http://www.MerckHomeEdition.com>

This online version of The Merck Manual of Medical Information—Second Home Edition, is very similar to the print version of except for: Alphabetical order: For ease of use, sections, chapters, and topics are listed alphabetically in the online version. The names of some chapters and topics have been edited to make alphabetization more relevant. Multimedia extras: The online version contains photographs, audio and video material not found in the print version. Updates: The online version is updated periodically with new information.

<http://www.s9.com/biography>

This dictionary covers more than 28,000 notable men and women who have shaped our world from ancient times to the present day. The dictionary can be searched by birth years, death years, positions held, professions, literary and artistic works, achievements, and other keywords.

<http://www.peoplespot.com>

If you're looking for information relating to people, try this site. Categories include quick reference directories, records, statistics, notable people, making connections, reuniting people, philanthropy, opinions and discussion, self-knowledge, people in the spotlight, feature archives, lists of people, etc.

<http://www.become.com>

The Become.com research service is dedicated to helping you locate valuable (and often hard to find) shopping-related research: buying guides, expert reviews, consumer reviews, articles, specifications, forums, merchants, and a variety of other relevant information. This site directs you to research-related information that helps you best determine what to buy. Once you've figured out what you want, one click takes you to the comparison shopping service, which you can use to find the online store offering the best price on the item you're looking for. You can sort by price, narrow your search by different criteria, and add items to the innovative "My Favorites," a tool which allows you to create and save a list of products for easy reference or comparison.

<http://www.consumersearch.com/www>

ConsumerSearch is a tool that makes it easier for consumers to base their purchase decisions on the best available competitive analyses, with the minimum amount of effort. Its methodology is to identify the experts in any particular product or service category, then highlight the best reviewers and what consensus exists on which products are best bets.

<http://www.allreaders.com>

AllReaders.com is a collection of book reviews contributed by "scholars" who add metadata information about the book to enhance the review, and make it easy to find titles based on a wide range of criteria.

<http://www.bookspot.com/comparisonshopping.htm>

From this site, you can choose six different price-comparison engines, including <http://www.addall.com>, when you're shopping for books. This is also a "gateway" to many other book-related Web pages.

<http://www.bookfinder.com>

BookFinder.com is the open marketplace for books online—a one-stop ecommerce search engine where you can search through over 100 million new, used, rare, and out of print books for sale. Searches include results from every major online catalog, and from dozens of independent sources you might not have heard of. Click through to the bookseller's website to buy the book directly from the seller.

<http://www.searchebooks.com>

SearcheBooks allows you to search the full text of thousands of online books. When you search, you get two URLs per hit, one that links directly to the book, and the other that links to the page of the source providing the book. From this site, you can link to many other valuable information sources on the Web.

<http://www.waterborolibrary.org/bklista.htm>

Book Lists and Bibliographies: If you'd rather browse than search, the Waterboro, Maine public library offers a comprehensive directory of recommended booklists available on the Web. The Mostly Fiction! booklist is categorized by topic, but also includes a useful list of "if you like" sites that make recommendations based on author, character, or series.

<http://www.Publicradiofan.com>

Created and maintained by Kevin Kelly, this is a great site for public radio listeners. It serves as a directory to public radio stations in the US and around the world, linking to both the Websites and audio feeds as well as programming schedules. It also offers program listings by station, time (including what's on now), or program (the list is huge). Visitors can look up when their favorite programs air on their local station, find an Internet broadcast of the show at an alternative time, discover new programs and stations, etc. The site is especially useful for finding new programs from non-US stations.

<http://www.lights.com/pickalink/freeisp> http://www.emailaddresses.com/email_internet.htm
<http://www.freedomlist.com>
<http://www.freebielist.com/isp.htm>

Lists of free Internet service providers.

<http://www.charitynavigator.org>

Charity Navigator, America's premiere independent charity evaluator, works to advance a more efficient and responsive philanthropic marketplace by evaluating the financial health of America's largest charities. Also see <http://www.researchspot.com/charities.htm#RATINGS> and <http://www.give.org/reports/index.asp> for ratings of charities.

<http://serviceleader.org/vv>

Here you can find information designed to encourage and assist in the development and success of volunteer activities that can be completed, in whole or in part, via the Internet. Virtual volunteering allows anyone to contribute time and expertise to not-for-profit organizations, schools, government offices and other agencies that utilize volunteer services, from his or her home or office. Also visit <http://www.givespot.com> for more opportunities to help make the world a better place.

<http://www.fanlight.com>

Fanlight Productions has been distributing outstanding film and video works on health care, mental health, disabilities, gerontology, ethics, the workplace, family issues and gender for over 20 years. Fanlight Productions was founded by independent filmmakers to guarantee that their productions would receive the kind of individualized marketing attention they deserved. Over the years they have acquired additional works selectively, choosing to remain specialized in order to be able to offer producers an unusual degree of ongoing personal attention to their productions. They currently represent more than one hundred and fifty independent and broadcast producers.

<http://www.docuseek.com>

DocuSeek is a search site for independent documentary, social issue, and educational videos available in the U.S. and Canada. DocuSeek allows you to simultaneously search several leading film distributors' complete collections, representing the highest quality documentary and instructional media, films and videos available.

http://www.libraries.rutgers.edu/rul/rr_gateway/research_guides/research_guides.shtml

Subject Research Guides: An important resource from the Rutgers University Libraries, this guide puts the top research sources in many topic areas into one easy-to-use location.

<http://spireproject.com>

This site is offered as both a research guide and a search-engine alternative, and provides a number of searching tutorials on specific topics that feature numerous links and search forms. Most tutorials contain a mix of official or governmental sites, databases, libraries, and commercial resources.

<http://library.albany.edu/internet/choose.html>

Here you can find help with choosing a search engine or directory that will be most useful to you in particular types of searches. Laura Cohen, University of Albany Libraries, has assembled an online guide to help you pick the right search engine for your research. The guide is divided into two sections: fields and file types. The "field" section covers just about every type of search available, including audio/music, geographic location, images, languages, Usenet, and much more.

http://www.highbeam.com/web/index.asp?refid=rville_down

HighBeam Web Research allows you to search the best of the Web all from one place — search, news, discussion, business information and research Web sites. Find your answers faster by customizing your search and searching only the sites that best fit your research. Save your search preferences and your best searches for your next research project.

<http://www.refdesk.com>

The jam-packed Refdesk.com is full of facts and figures, updated news, and links to sources from phone books to world clocks. The site virtually speed-dials the answers to you and has been called: “The single best source for facts on the Net.”

<http://www.refdesk.com/shelves.html>

An excellent list of “reference shelves” on the Internet.

<http://www.specialissues.com/lol>

Gary Price’s list of lists: The Internet contains many lists of information, a number of which present information in the form of rankings. This collection is designed to be a clearinghouse for these types of resources. Many of these lists have been designed to be interactive/searchable and provide greater utility than the printed versions.

<http://www.resourceshelf.com>

The Virtual Acquisition Shelf and News Desk. This list of great new Web sites in all topic areas is updated daily by Gary Price and has a searchable archive of the listed and reviewed sites as well. The ResourceShelf’s sister site, <http://DocuTicker.com>, is a daily update of new reports from government agencies, non-governmental organizations, think tanks, and other groups.

<http://www.pandia.com>

Pandia is a good combination of search engine and Web research tool. You can learn how to search the Web more efficiently, read about search engines, optimization and sites devoted to searching, and gain easy access to all the best search resources on the Internet.

http://www.stthomas.edu/academicsupport/helpful_study_skills_links.htm

Here you’ll find links to helpful study skills links on time management, test taking, note taking, reading skills, making citations, and subject resources, including psychology.

<http://www.ipl.org/div/pf>

Internet Public Library Pathfinders are home-grown guides written by IPL staff which are intended to help you get started doing research on a particular topic, both online and at your local library.

<http://www.netskills.ac.uk/onlinecourses/tonic>

If you’re looking for a basic introduction to the Internet and Web, TONIC (The Online Netskills Interactive Course), might be a solution. TONIC is available at no charge. You’ll need to create a login that is used if you want to return to the tutorial precisely where you left off. Netskills provide a range of services to facilitate the effective use of the Internet and the Web for e-Learning, research, administration, marketing and other activities. These services include standard and bespoke workshops, accredited training programs, training materials and strategic staff development.

<http://www.libdex.com>

For those wanting to search the online catalogs of various libraries, Libdex indexes library homepages and Web-OPACs (online public-access catalogs). You can browse the index by country, OPAC vendor, or library name keyword (try it by typing the name of the library nearest you!) Library entries include name, city, country, library type, and links to the library homepage and Web catalog.

<http://www.digital-librarian.com>

The Digital Librarian is "A librarian's choice of the best of the Web." Check this long list of topics and click one, such as "Psychology," "Reference," "Employment," or "Social Sciences," and you'll find another list of some of the best and most useful sites on the Web related to that topic.

<http://www.public.iastate.edu/~CYBERSTACKS/LiveRef.htm>

LiveRef(tm), a registry of real-time digital reference services, provides a wealth of links related to real-time reference services. This is a great resource for users looking for an online reference librarian. The reference "desks" themselves are categorized according to type of organization (e.g., academic, public, other), and users should note that many of the academic libraries offer online help only to those affiliated with the university. There are, however, public services available, particularly in some of the other sections. The site also includes a hyperlinked bibliography, a listing of digital reference technologies, conferences and workshops, discussion lists, and more.

<http://www.rdn.ac.uk>

The Resource Discovery Network is the UK's free national gateway to Internet resources for the learning, teaching and research community. The service currently links to more than 100,000 resources via a series of subject-based information gateways (or hubs). The RDN is primarily aimed at Internet users in UK further and higher education but is freely available to all. In contrast to search engines, the RDN gathers resources which are carefully selected by subject specialists in our partner institutions. You can search and browse through the resources, and be confident that your results will connect you to Web sites relevant to learning, teaching and research in your subject area. The RDN is a collaboration of over seventy educational and research organisations, including the Natural History Museum and the British Library, and builds upon the foundations of the subject gateway activity carried out under the JISC's (Joint Information Systems Committee) eLib Programme.

<http://www.lita.org/committe/toptech/toolkit.htm>

LITA, (Library and Technology Association, a division of ALA), has just updated its impressive web search toolkit. A section featuring news search tools is now part of the compilation.

Employment Sites

<http://www.apa.org/ads>

This site provides a monthly listing of US and international job openings in psychology by state and country. You can also explore "Practice Opportunities," "Publications and Other Advertising," "Conferences and Workshops," and "gradPSYCH Classifieds Online."

<http://www.careerweb.com>

Your complete online employment source, which includes a career inventory, a library of career-related sites, career advice from experts, and a bookstore of hundreds of career-related titles.

<http://www.employmentspot.com>

This is a portal from which you can link to all kinds of employment-related sites and resources.

<http://www.jobsonline.com>

This site provides job seekers with the ability to register to search for positions, plus information on companies, relocation, online training, career fairs, salaries, interviewing, writing resumes and cover letters, etc.

<http://www.jobpsychology.net>

Mental health jobs: Job psychology.net is part of the Jobsience.com (<http://www.jobsience.com>) network, a career portal serving the health care biotech and pharmaceutical industries which hosts a variety of tools to help you start change or advance your career.

<http://www.psywww.com/careers/index.htm>

Marky Lloyd's Careers in Psychology Page: The purpose this Careers in Psychology site is to help undergraduate students learn what they can do with a degree in psychology. (Graduate students may find information of interest in the section, "Selected Web Sites Containing Career and Graduate School Information of Interest to Psychology Majors."). The resources on this page focus on: (1) careers in psychology at the bachelor's, master's, and doctoral level and (2) academic information about psychology at the bachelor's and graduate levels.

<http://www.schoolstaff.com>

The purpose of schoolSTAFF.com and its alliance with nearly 70 other employment websites is to help educators and future educators find jobs in education. It does not make any money from the people that come to schoolSTAFF.com to look for jobs. It does not collect any fees from job seekers, sell job seeker names, or charge education employers a placement fee when they hire a job seeker that applied via schoolSTAFF.com. It does not accept advertisements from companies looking to take people away from careers in education. It simply helps educators and education employers find each other.

<http://www.weblens.org/jobs.html>

The WebLens site lists large numbers of links that will help you plan your career, polish your resume, tap into youth and student resources, find a job, and much more. Locate corporate recruiting pages, apply online, find a recruiter, or start a freelance career.

Psychology Sites

http://www.1st-spot.net/topic_mentalhealth.html

1st Spot Mental Health and Disorders provides a large number of links to other mental health sites and resources, including organizations, therapists, and sites related to various disorders.

<http://www.ala.org/ala/acrl/acrlpubs/crlnews/backissues2005/June05/counseling.htm>

This is a list of Internet resources in various areas of counseling for students, professionals, and consumers, from the Association of College and Research Libraries.

<http://www.aamft.org>

The American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy (AAMFT) is the professional association for the field of marriage and family therapy. It represents the professional interests of more than 23,000 marriage and family therapists throughout the United States, Canada and abroad. The association facilitates research, theory development and education. It also develops standards for graduate education and training, clinical supervision, professional ethics and the clinical practice of marriage and family therapy.

<http://www.abacon.com/famtherapy/index.html>

On the Allyn & Bacon Family Therapy Website, you can find general information concerning family therapy, in addition to a historical overview, therapist profiles, Web links, and a family therapy timeline.

<http://www.alternativementalhealth.com>

This is supposedly the world's largest site on non-drug approaches for mental health. It features testimonials, over 100 articles, and the Web's only directory of alternative mental health practitioners. You can also get information from the bookstore, support groups, email lists, and free monthly newsletter.

<http://athealth.com/Practitioner/ceduc>

Online Mental Health Continuing Education: Take online courses or purchase home study courses from the athealth.com e-Campus. Ahealth.com offers Web-based, interactive continuing education courses for mental health professionals.

<http://athealth.com/practitioner>

The Practitioner Connection: How does the Internet affect your practice? This site provides resources for mental health practitioners, including a free weekly e-newsletter.

<http://www.apa.org>

Based in Washington, DC, the American Psychological Association (APA) is a scientific and professional organization that represents psychology in the United States. With more than 155,000 members, APA is the largest association of psychologists worldwide. Its mission is to advance psychology as a science and profession and as a means of promoting health and human welfare.

<http://behavenet.com>

BehaveNet® is a site providing information about behavioral health care for behavioral health care and medical providers and organizations.

<http://www.behavior.net>

Behavior OnLine aspires to be the premier World Wide Web gathering place for mental health professionals and applied behavioral scientists--a place where professionals of every discipline can feel at home.

<http://www.dialogical.net/psychology/index.html>

The Psychology Virtual Library keeps track of online information as part of The World Wide Web Virtual Library. Sites are inspected and evaluated for their adequacy as information sources before they are linked from here. You'll find links to information on academic departments, basic academic psychology, books and publishers, clinical social work, directories or guides to psychology sites, e-mail lists and newsgroups, employment/entrepreneurship, the history of psychology, journals (electronic and print), library resources online, mental health resources, professional societies, psychology of religion, school psychology, stress management, transpersonal psychology, and new psychology sites.

<http://www.clinicalsocialwork.com>

Resources for psychotherapists and professional mental health workers collected by Patricia D. McClendon, who is interested especially in the effects of all types of trauma on the minds and bodies of survivors. Identifying and communicating effective treatment protocol for trauma survivors is, in part, what this home page is meant to accomplish. Patricia McClendon is most interested in dissociative disorders and post-traumatic stress disorder.

http://dmoz.org/Science/Social_Sciences/Psychology

Here you will find links to information in many major psychology categories from the Open Directory Project.

<http://www.fso.com>

The Family Solutions Institute is the source from which you can purchase the Study Guide and other resources to help you prepare for the National Marriage & Family Therapy Licensing Examination. The Study Guide is a 600+ page hardbound book that concisely organizes the information most likely to be tested by the exam. The book presents this large body of knowledge in summary form, emphasizing the most important concepts needed for the exam, in a very "user friendly" format. It is designed with both recent graduates and experienced clinicians in mind. Contact Family Solutions Institute, toll free: (888) 583-3388.

<http://www.healthyplace.com>

HealthyPlace.com is a large consumer mental health site that provides comprehensive information on psychological disorders and psychiatric medications from both a consumer and expert point of view. You'll find active chat rooms, hosted support groups, people who keep online journals/diaries, psychological tests, breaking mental health news, mental health videos, online documentary films, a mental health radio show and more. See http://www.healthyplace.com/Site/conf_index.htm to find mental health conference transcripts.

<http://helping.apa.org>

Talk to someone who can help! The APA's "Help Center" allows you to get information on using psychology in the workplace, the mind-body connection, psychological issues involving families and relationships, help for teens, common-sense ways to protect your privacy and access mental health resources online, getting free brochures, finding a psychologist, etc.

<http://www.ipl.org/div/subject/browse/soc30.00.00>

The Internet Public Library's Psychology Reference links for the topic, "Social Sciences – Psychology: The science that deals with human mental processes and behavior." It contains about 30 links to other Web resources in the field.

<http://www.ismho.org>

The International Society for Mental Health Online (ISMHO) was formed in 1997 to promote the understanding, use and development of online communication, information and technology for the international mental health community. You will find links to sites that maintain a level of high quality and cooperation within the psychological, psychiatric and mental health fields.

<http://www.lima-associates.com/relsites.htm>

The Continuing Education Resource Center: Lima Associates offers independent self-study opportunities that enable behavioral healthcare professionals to receive important continuing professional education with greater convenience. The high quality content and straightforward format of our workshop presentations will advance your professional education. Each complete self-study program contains audiotapes recorded from live workshops, descriptive materials and a post-test and evaluation. You will be guided to Web sites of related behavioral healthcare professionals, articles and research institutes.

<http://www.mental-health-matters.com>

This is a directory of mental health and mental illness resources for professionals, patients and families. It features the best the Web has to offer in mental health resources and information, frequent updates, and selected listings of alternative treatments and mental health research for psychological disorders, mental health law, emotional support, mental health statistics, patients' rights, psychological help, support groups, and self-help. You will also find links to all psychological and emotional disorders.

<http://www.mentalhealth.com>

Internet Mental Health Resources. This site provides links to a substantial list of topics applicable to psychology and mental health.

<http://www.mentalhealth.org>

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's (SAMHSA) National Mental Health Information Center provides information about mental health via a toll-free telephone number (800-789-2647), this Web site, and more than 600 publications. The National Mental Health Information Center was developed for users of mental health services and their families, the general public, policy makers, providers, and the media.

<http://www.mentalhealth.samhsa.gov/cmhs>

The Center for Mental Health Services (CMHS) within the National Mental Health Information Center was established in 1992 and "leads Federal efforts to treat mental illnesses by promoting mental health and by preventing the development or worsening of mental illness when possible". To that end, the agency has created this Web site to provide information about its ongoing programs, along with offering information for the public who may be curious or concerned about these issues. Practitioners and the public will appreciate the well-organized Publications area which is organized thematically and includes topics such as preventions, disaster, and the elderly. The site also has a complete listing of related activities, such as the youth violence prevention initiative and the Center of Women, Violence and Trauma.

<http://www.mentalhelp.net>

Mental Help Net is the oldest and largest online mental health directory guide and community. You can learn about disorders and treatments, search professional resources, and browse the reading room, which includes book reviews.

<http://www.metrokc.gov/dchs/mhd/vendors.htm>

”Portal” to the King County Mental Health, Chemical Abuse and Dependency Services Division’s lists of mental health services vendors and providers.

<http://www.mhsanctuary.com/index.html>

The Mental Health Sanctuary is “The Online Resource for patients, families, and professionals in mental health.” This site features “sanctuaries” (complete comprehensive Web sites) on various topics. The site provides news, a mental health bookstore, articles, a clinician’s forum, toll-free resources (including numbers of mental health clinics), information on medications, and other resources.

<http://www.mri.org>

This is the Web site of the Mental Research Institute, a research and training institute for the interactional study of individuals, families and their communities.

<http://www.nlm.nih.gov/medlineplus/mentalhealth.html>

MedlinePlus: Mental Health Resources: This site by the U.S. National Library of Medicine and the National Institutes of Health and provides resources on most aspects of mental health.

<http://planetpsych.com>

The site contains a compatibility quiz and a depression screening test; a therapist directory, bookstore, and newsletter; and basic psychology information about disorders, treatments and other topics in psychology.

<http://www.psyplexus.com>

PsyPlexus is an attempt to increase the dissemination of information on mental health, especially to professionals in the developing world, utilizing the opportunities offered by the Internet.

<http://www.psy.pdx.edu/PsiCafe>

The Psi Café site is a clearinghouse of important links and resources dealing with the field of psychology and its many specialties, including behavioral psychology, experimental psychology, and social psychology. The site's homepage is well organized, with sections that allow visitors to review the top headlines in psychology news (culled from a host of periodicals, newspapers, and journals), examine important dates in the history of psychology, and a What's New? area. For those seeking to enter the field of psychology, there is an area on applying to graduate programs, with additional links to related Web sites. Equally valuable is the section dedicated to key theorists in the field, which visitors can browse by last name or by their particular perspective from which they are known. Numerous theorists are covered in this area, such as Jerome Bruner, Carl Rogers, Abraham Maslow, Erik Erikson, and Howard Gardner.

<http://psychcentral.com>

Psych Central has been providing reliable and free mental health, support and psychology information and resources online since 1995.

<http://psychinnovations.com/pubhome.htm>

Psychotherapy Innovations: Mental health direct search page: mental disorders, psychology, and many related topics.

<http://www.psycline.org/journals/psycline.html>

PsychLine provides you with a guide to more than 2,000 psychology and social science journals on the Web. It has earned a strong reputation as one of the most comprehensive and up-to-date indexes of psychology and social science journals on the Web.

<http://www.psychologicalscience.org>

The American Psychological Society's membership includes the nation's foremost psychological scientists and academics. Members cover the entire spectrum of basic and applied psychological science. Founded in 1988, APS's mission is to promote, protect, and advance the interests of scientifically oriented psychology in research, application, and the improvement of human welfare.

<http://psychology.about.com>

This site offers access to many psychology resources, including articles on various topics, psychological tests, career information, self-help, academic resources, books, etc.

<http://www.psychwatch.com/journalpage.htm>

Psychwatch has compiled a comprehensive list of psychological journals from various disciplines that can be accessed online. Some sites provide abstracts, full-text, or just information

<http://www.psychwww.com>

This Web site contains psychology-related information for students and teachers of psychology. Browse through the subdivisions of the site and the list of new items.

<http://human-nature.com/odmh>

The Online Dictionary of Mental Health is a global information resource and research tool covering all of the disciplines contributing to our understanding of mental health. Here you'll find links to many sites offering different viewpoints on issues in mental health, which are accessible using the A-Z links. For a range of general and medical dictionaries, a thesaurus, and many other internet links and search tools, try the library. Elsewhere on the site you will also find details of courses, events, seminars and conferences, and contact details for the academic, clinical and administrative staff.

<http://www.socialpsychology.org>

The Social Psychology Network claims to be the largest social psychology database on the Internet where you'll find more than 12,000 links related to psychology.

<http://allpsych.com>

AllPsych Online remains one of the most comprehensive psychology websites on the Internet. It is referenced by universities all over the world and in several psychology textbooks. The site offers educational material on many topics related to psychology and will continue to help keep students informed, up to date, and interested in psychology.

<http://www.umdj.edu/psyevnts/psyjumps.html>

<http://www.umdj.edu/psyevnts/pointers.html>

Meetings, Organizations and General Resources in Behavioral Healthcare and Telehealth, and Behavioral Healthcare and Telehealth Resources on the Web: These sites feature a comprehensive calendar of events and links to many mental health resources on the Web.

<http://www.wcmhcnet.org/StaticContent/StaticPages/body.htm>

The Washington Community Mental Health Council is a non-profit, professional association of about fifty mental health centers in communities across the State of Washington. The aim of the Council is to create healthy and secure communities through partnerships, advocacy, high quality service, and public education.

Organization Development and Leadership Sites

<http://www.academy.umd.edu/aboutus/index.htm>

The Academy of Leadership promotes leadership knowledge and practices that empower all those who strive for a just, equitable and thriving society, particularly those who have been historically underrepresented in leadership. Working from the belief that there is leadership in every person, the Academy studies, trains, and teaches emerging and experienced leaders to cross boundaries - between theory and practice, business and government, majority and minority groups, and among nations. At the Academy, it's all about changing the face of leadership.

<http://www.aom.pace.edu>

The purpose of the Academy of Management is to foster the general advancement of research, learning, teaching and practice in the management field and to encourage the extension and unification of management knowledge. The Academy publishes scholarly papers, conducts forums for the exchange of management knowledge and provides services that enhance the science and practice of management.

<http://www.ahea.org>

The Adult Education Alliance, a 501(c) (3) non-profit corporation, is an association of individuals and institutions committed to adult education. The primary mission of the Alliance is to serve professionals and institutions offering alternative undergraduate and graduate degree programs for adults by fostering the exchange of ideas, supporting the professional development of members, and serving as an advocate for adult students and alternative degree programs for adults.

<http://www.amanet.org/index.htm>

The American Management Association is dedicated to building the knowledge, skills and behaviors that will help business professionals and their organizations grow and prosper. Since 1923, the business community has turned to the American Management Association for the practical training and business tools.

<http://www.astd.org>

The American Society for Training and Development is a professional association and leading resource on workplace learning and performance issues. ASTD provides information, research, analysis and practical information.

<http://www.aqp.org>

The Association for Quality and Participation is an international not-for-profit membership association dedicated to improving workplaces through quality and participation practices.

<http://www.ccl.org/leadership/index.aspx>

The mission of the Center for Creative Leadership is to advance the understanding, practice and development of leadership for the benefit of society worldwide. The Center for Creative Leadership is a nonprofit educational institution that is an internationally recognized resource for understanding and expanding the leadership capabilities of individuals and organizations.

<http://www.ila-net.org>

The International Leadership Association (ILA) is the global network for all those who practice, study and teach leadership. The ILA promotes a deeper understanding of leadership knowledge and practices for the greater good of individuals and communities worldwide. The principal means by which our mission is accomplished is through the synergy that occurs by bringing together public and private sector leaders, scholars, educators and consultants from many disciplines and many nations. ILA strives to: The ILA strives to strengthen ties between those who study and those who practice leadership, serve as a forum where people can share ideas, research and practices about leadership; foster effective and ethical leadership in individuals, groups, organizations, and governments in the global community; and generate and disseminate interdisciplinary research and develop new knowledge and practices.

<http://cor-ex.com/sites/bestchng>

This directory of “Best Corporate Change Resources” lists resources relevant to corporate change. The resources fit under a variety of related topics: organizational change; corporate change; strategic change. They come from different perspectives - indeed may offer conflicting ideas and advice. By comparing them you are better equipped to judge what approaches are most relevant to your own situation.

<http://diversityintl.com>

Diversity Training University International offers on-line resources, including Daily Diversity Lessons and courses, for people who need information fast and credentials in a rewarding profession.

<http://www.fieldbook.com>

This site supports The Fifth Discipline Fieldbook series, including the recently published Schools That Learn. You can order books, view information about authors and contributors, read corrections and updates, scroll through a list of events, and link to related sites.

<http://fdncenter.org>

This Foundation Center site provides information and resources for those wanting to start a nonprofit organization.

http://www.mapnp.org/library/np_progs/org_dev.htm#anchor660058

Here you'll find the Free Management Library's Free, On-Line Non-profit Organization and Management Development Program (the Free Nonprofit Micro-eMBA(SM)), written by Carter McNamara, MBA, PhD.

<http://www.members.aol.com/odinst/index.htm>

The Organization Development Institute is a non-profit educational association organized in 1968 to promote an understanding of the field of Organization Development. Every year we publish The International Registry of O.D. Professionals and O.D. Handbook, and we meet at least twice a year both inside and outside the USA to keep our members and the public informed on recent developments in O.D.

<http://www.newhorizons.org>

New Horizons for Learning has served as a leading-edge resource for educational change. We have identified, communicated, and helped to implement successful educational strategies.

<http://www.ntl.org>

Founded in 1947, NTL Institute for Applied Behavioral Science offers training for professional and personal success by focusing on the individual as change agent. The Institute is a community of members and staff whose purposes are to advance the field of Applied Behavioral Science, eliminate oppression, and foster our core values by: Training in the theory and practice of group dynamics, organizational change, and societal change; learning from these experiences; sharing the results of the learning; and engaging in inquiry, knowledge building, and the publication of findings.

<http://www.odnetwork.org>

The OD Network Web site is sponsored by the Organization Development Network and is provided as a service to the community of organization development practitioners. The OD Network believes OD practitioners will increasingly expect services to be available using information technology, and particularly using the Web. Today's offerings are just the starting point.

<http://www.odnoregon.com>

The Oregon Organization Development Network's Web site offers links to other helpful OD sites.

<http://www.orgdct.com/OD%20resources-variety.htm>

This site provides links to various Organization Development resources, including sites related to introductory information on OD, appreciative inquiry, change dynamics, dialogue, cross-cultural diversity, future search, Johari window, leadership, self-differentiated leadership, family systems thinking and leadership, learning organizations, meetings, organizational culture, open space, systems, Tavistock, teams, theory, trust development and conflict management, personality type, values and ethics, and value-centered organizations. It has a link to the Free Management Library(SM), a complete, highly integrated information library for nonprofits and for-profits, which you can visit at <http://www.managementhelp.org>

<http://www.pfdf.org>

The Leader to Leader Institute has its roots in the social sector and its predecessor, the Peter F. Drucker Foundation for Nonprofit Management, which in January 2003 transferred its ongoing activities to the new identity. The Leader to Leader Institute furthers its mission "to strengthen the leadership of the social sector" by providing educational opportunities and resources to leaders.

<http://www.pfeiffer.com>

The Pfeiffer Web site, from which you can locate many titles in business, management, training, etc.

<http://www.socialpsychology.org/io.htm>

Listed here, from the Social Psychology Network, are links related to organizational psychology, industrial psychology, human resource management, and more. On the Home Page of the Social Psychology Network, the largest social psychology database on the Internet, you can find more than 5,000 links to many varieties of psychology-related resources (<http://www.socialpsychology.org>).

<http://www.tavistock.org/index.php>

The Tavistock Institute is an independent social science research, advisory and training organization established in 1947 as a company limited by guarantee and has charitable status. It seeks to apply social science ideas and methods to problems of policy and practice. A distinctive feature of the Institute's work is its focus on social, organizational and policy dynamics through action-research, organizational analysis and formative evaluation. The Institute's program of work currently includes projects with government, voluntary organizations and industry in Britain, in Europe and further afield. Its income is entirely derived from its own resources, research grants and contracts for specific research, consultancy, training and publishing activities.

LMK 11/07